

DMITRY V. DIDENKO, Doctor of Economics, Leading Research Fellow, Russian Presidential Academy of National Economy and Public Administration (RANEPA).

Doctor of Science in Economics (habilitation degree, 2016), Candidate of Science in History (PhD equivalent, 2000). His research and publications focus on human capital formation and efficiency in Russia and globally, in the context of innovative and catching-up development, with strong interest in multi-disciplinary studies relating to social aspects of economic growth and human development. He has extensive expertise in applied research and analytics for Russian financial institutions. Author and coauthor of ca. 100 academic papers (most in Russian, ca. 10 in English), including 3 books highlighting various issues of knowledge-intensive economy.